Provincial Legislative Report

The second session of the 13th Alberta legislature was officially prorogued last week by Hon. Dr. J. J. Bowlen, lieutenant-governor, who gave royal assent to 76 bills.

The traditional shower of paper by members of the Press Gallery sent M.L.A.'s home from a session which was one of the toughest in years from the standpoint of long hours of work. It opened Feb. 9th and lasted 34 days along with a record of 14 night sittings.

Among the highlights of the session were the new Election Act, which abolishes the preferential voting system and replaces it with the "X" system, and a new Game Act which imposes tighter restrictions on hunting over private land.

On top of that, the house approved a record $242,000,000 budget for the coming fiscal year and repealed one tax—the unearned increment tax which has netted the province around $1,300,000 annually.

The session just ended also launched what may be a major review of the provinces liquor laws. An eight-member, all-party committee was appointed to investigate the Liquor Act and recommend amendments at the next regular session.

It was one of the most significant sessions in years from the standpoint of municipal governments in Alberta. The government took the first steps towards a full scale review of provincial municipal financial arrangements, aimed at finding new sources of revenue for municipalities and making them self-sustaining.

Don't be surprised if the financial review results in new taxes being imposed. From outward appearances, the government is laying the groundwork for the day revenue from oil and gas won't be so big. Provincial Treasurer E. W. Hinman has indicated that revenue sources such as a sales tax and poll tax may be considered as possible sources of revenue.

Meetings between government and municipal officials started last week, and will continue during the coming year. The government hopes to wash its hands of the unwieldy municipal grant program by next year.

The new Election Act was by far the most contentious issue of the session. Members debated it for more than 16 hours and despite a determined effort by the opposition to have the preferential voting system retained the government didn't yield on any major points.

The government argued that the preferential system is too complicated for the average voter to comprehend and results in too many spoiled ballots.

Opposition ranks accused the government of seeking political advantage by introducing a voting system which favors the party in power by splitting the opposition vote between two or more other parties. They claim the government is afraid of the preferential system after the snap election last June, which saw Social Credit strength drop from 51 to 37.

Members of the opposition raised two major questions which they claim weren't satisfactorily answered:

1. Has there been any public demand for the "X" voting system or widespread dissatisfaction with the preferential system?

2. Why the sudden decision to scrap the preferential system after it has been used in Alberta since 1924?

The amendments to the Game Act proved a real thorn in the government's side.

In the first place, Lands and Forests Minister Norman Willmore wasn't too happy about it because some features of it were considered unnecessary.

Sees Economic Expansion Continuing

According to Canada's minister of trade and commerce, prospects for a relatively prolonged period of economic expansion appear bright indeed, given appropriate restraint on the part of all groups in the economic community. Reporting on Canada's economic status during 1955, Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe, seen above, credits, to a large extent, the expansion now under way in the country to the increasing world dependence on Canada as a source of industrial materials. This growing dependence has accounted for the rise in exports, the high level of activity in natural resources industries, and for a major portion of the expansion in capital facilities. The Canadian consumer fared exceptionally well during the last year. Rising incomes, accompanied by stable prices, enhanced the buying power of his earnings. The result has been an improvement in living standards seldom surpassed in peacetime circumstances.

Mrs. Agnes Attwood has received word of the death of her brother, Henry McIntyre of Duluth, Minnesota, who she hadn't seen for 50 years until he came to Raymond three years ago to visit and to attend the marriage of Mrs. Attwood's grand-daughter, Carol Larsen. He came again to visit the following year.

The men reported that the convention was well attended very informative and indicated that the Credit Union movement is now world wide and is believed to be the fastest growing organization in America. The simple credit union philosophy of helping your neighbor to financial stability has wide appeal and provides a distinct service to both laborer and self employed. The ladies reported pleasant weather, interesting shopping centers and a thoroughly enjoyable trip.

forceable. But he was more or less forced into it by pressure from farm groups and the Social Credit caucus.

Then when it was introduced, Fish and Game Associations throughout the province launched a lightning campaign and persuaded the government to yield on a few points.

When the bill was finally presented in amended form it still left many members dissatisfied, and sparked a debate which split through party lines. Some members on both sides of the houses criticized the government for not providing protection for farmers.

As the legislation stands hunters can shoot without the owner's consent on unoccupied land which is fenced or cultivated. Now permission is not needed unless the owner lives on the land or adjacent to it.

Under the new bill any land posted with "No Shooting" signs becomes a game sanctuary. When land is posted no one can shoot on it—not even the owner.

The session also saw introduction of new laws regarding automobile insurance. After Oct. 1, any motorist involved in an accident must show proof of financial responsibility or have his car impounded.

The new laws don't impose compulsory car insurance, but they should have the effect of encouraging more drivers to provide themselves with public liability and property damage coverage.

From an observer's standpoint, it was interesting to watch Social Credit's reaction to the larger opposition, which grew from 10 to 24 members in the June election.

Premier Manning's government weathered only one non-confidence motion during the session. Liberal Harold E. Tanner, Edmonton High School teacher, introduced a motion of non-confidence during debate on the reply to the Speech from the Throne.

In it he censured the government for its policies on education, claiming standards and teacher qualifications had been allowed to slip. The government and its supporters defeated the motion easily.

Another important piece of legislation will permit local plebiscites on the fluoridation issue. Two thirds of the voters must consent before a local council can introduce fluorides into public drinking water supplies.

Sound Advance

The quite remarkable degree of continued good health in the Canadian economy is fully confirmed in the 2nd Harris budget, says the Financial Post.

The hope he expressed a year ago for a $26 billion gross national product, 10% higher than 1954, has been realized.

Since the cost of living has remained stable, there was a significant increase in the wealth and welfare of most Canadians. More people were at work than ever before, unemployment was very low, wages and income were higher. By nearly every test, the past year was one of very solid economic advance.

Big Spending

Consumer spending was the big spur to expansion throughout '55, reflecting in part the sharp rise in personal incomes, sums up the Financial Post. All types of consumer purchases showed gains with the major advance being chalked up by the buyers of consumer goods such as stoves, TV sets, refrigerators, cars etc. Per capita consumption of durables soared 40% above the year 1949. Consumer outlays and housing expenditures together account for half the increase in what Canadians spent in '55.

Alberta's Natural Gas Industry:

TRANSMISSION

Unlike most fuels natural gas cannot travel by road or rail. But "express transportation" is given by steel transmission lines through which gas is forced under pressure from production fields to Alberta's population centers. These pipelines are the "heavyweights" of the natural gas system, and nothing is left to chance in laying them. All seams are carefully welded; then the pipe is cleaned, enamelled and wrapped to guard against corrosion, and finally "pressure tested". When in the ground transmission lines are tested yearly — maintained in top shape to give "express transportation!"

With GAS you get service
—we plan it that way!

Rheumatic Fever

Rheumatic fever is one of the more serious diseases of childhood, the symptoms of which often resemble those of lesser ills. Loss of weight, pallor, loss of appetite, feverishness, tiredness—any of which may indicate a milder infection—may be almost unnoticed, so gradual can be their approach. If these symptoms appear, a child should have medical attention. Rheumatic fever most frequently affects youngsters between five and fifteen years, but may occur in older people. One of its most dangerous effects is upon the heart, which can lead to permanent damage to that organ.

Mr. and Mrs. Rulon Hirscho and family of Fort McLeod recently paid a call on her mother, Mrs. Agnes Attwood.

EAT MARGARINE - STORE BUTTER

Prior to 1949 virtually everything spread on bread in Canada was butter. Today, says The Financial Post, one third of the spread is margarine. Average per capita consumption of butter in Canada is down to approximately 20 pounds a year. Average per capita consumption of margarine is up to over seven pounds per year.

Like the mythical ostrich which refused to face facts we are piling up butter in storage at the taxpayer's expense and selling it to the Czechs and Poles for about half the price Canadian citizens are permitted to buy it.

MEAT EATERS - Canadians are not bitten by any vegetarian bug, thinks The Financial Post. Per capita consumption of meat in 1955, it points out, rose to 151.5 lb., up from the year before's 148 lb. Behind the increase is bigger buying of pork. This is the order of preference and per capita consumption: beef 72 lb. (72 in '54); pork 58 lb., (53.7); veal 8.8 lb., (10.1); lamb 2.8 lb., (2.5); canned meat 4.2 lb., (4.4); other 5.7 lb., (5.3).

"The average Canadian income will increase at least 18% in terms of buying power, by 1961", D. G. Seebach, controller of B. F. Goodrich Canada Limited, told the Foremen's Club of Stratford last night. He said that the resultant increase in the standard of living would be a natural progression of the expanding economy of Canada.

"Increased productivity is a basic factor in our economy development. The productivity of our manufacturing industry has been increasing about three per cent a year in relation to the employed workers. On this basis, the gross national production per employed worker will increase from the current $4,962 to $5,830 in the next six years," said Mr. Seebach. He said that Canada's economy has emphatically shifted from agriculture to industry. One out of every four Canadians now works in manufacturing enterprise and one out of every three dollars that make up our national income is derived from manufacturing. He said that Canada has invested about 20% of her gross national product in capital goods in the post-war years while the U. S. figures for the same period indicated a 14% investment.

Canada's economic prosperity has been overwhelmingly financed by domestic sources. The necessary capital investment for our progress since the war is 85% internal while only 15 per cent has come from outside sources, said Mr. Seebach.

The Salvation Army's Red Shield Appeal for funds will begin on May 1st, and run until May 22nd, according to Air Marshall W. A. Bishop, V. C., C.B., D.S.O., Chairman of The Salvation Army's National Advisory Board.

Commenting on the current "plethora of publicity" advocating united fund-raising, the Air Marshall said: "It is to the advantage of Canada and Canadians to see that The Salvation Army with its national network of need - meeting institutions and services is adequately supported. The Army cannot afford not to reach its objectives, and united fund-raising is not always successful. It is gratifying to know, however, that the sign of the Red Shield has been, every year across Canada, the sign of objectives reached or exceeded."

"As incongruous as it may seem in the face of maintained national prosperity, human need is making itself increasingly known," the Air Marshall said. "The Salvation Army in Canada is caring for twice as many persons as it did ten years ago. The need for a successful appeal is therefore urgent and vital".

Alcan Project To Double Kitimat Capacity

The tremendous world demand for aluminum is pushing the huge B. C. development at Kitimat the Aluminum Co. of Canada into an even more rapid expansion race than had been planned, reports The Financial Post.

With a view to the fast developing market Alcan planners decided to double capacity at the Kitimat-Kemano project in northern British Columbia. When completed in 1959 the present $190 million capital program will have upped total capacity to 330,000 tons annually. (It will be around 181,500 tons by the end of this year.)

Unless there is a major change in economic outlook before then Alcan management will likely keep pushing its growth program even farther until the top of some 550,000 tons a year capacity has been reached. This would be roughly equivalent to the entire production rate in eastern Canada now.

The furniture for the tourist accommodation aboard the new Canadian Pacific flagship Empress of Britain is made from straight grained ash, elm, chestnut and French walnut.

In its 1955 annual report issued today to 174,300 shareholders, Socony Mobil Oil Company, Inc., reports its exploration and development activities in Western Canada over the past decade have begun to show results.

The rapidly growing crude oil production of the company's Canadian affiliated, Mobil Oil of Canada, Ltd., averaged 18,800 barrels a day during December 1955 and 12,600 barrels a day throughout the year, compared with 2,800 barrels a day during 1954. Last year's sharp increase was made possible by new pipelines that began fields in Alberta and Saskatchewan, delivering oil early in the year from

In Alberta, Mobil Oil's production from Pembina field, which the company discovered in 1953, amounted to nearly 12,000 barrels a day at the end of 1955. Mobil Oil has a half interest there in 48,000 acres, on which 282 oil wells had been completed by the end of the year.

In southwestern Saskatchewan, Mobil Oil and its associates have continued to explore and develop the Fosterton area where 10 fields have been found since 1952, including one discovered in 1955. The company has a half interest in 244 producing wells in that area. At the end of 1955, its share of production was flowing to market at a daily rate of 5,000 barrels. In southeastern Saskatchewan, Mobil Oil has a half interest in 29 oil fields completed by the end of 1955.

In British Columbia, where Mobil Oil has a quarter interest in more than million acres, one oil well and seven gas wells were completed during 1955. It was reported, although results there have been encouraging, it is still too early to estimate the importance of the area.

"Substantial capital investments that we have made in the past 10 years have enabled us to keep pace with the growing demand for oil throughout the world," stated Albert L. Nickerson, president of Socony Mobil. "This growth has been particularly rapid in the Eastern Hemisphere, which in 1955 accounted for about 42% of our total earnings."

Mr. Nickerson said the long-range outlook for petroleum demand appears favorable. He cited an estimate by the company's economists that U. S. demand in 1960 would be about 20% higher than in 1955, and that demand in the rest of the free world in 1960 would exceed 1955 by almost 50%.

"How much of the raising (U. S.) demand for petroleum can be met out of domestic supplies poses a question to both the industry and the company," Mr. Nickerson continued. "We believe that the entire demand could be met from domestic supplies only at prohibitive costs. As a practical matter, therefore, we expect that both the company and the industry will have to look beyond the borders of the U. S. in the years ahead for increasing amounts of crude oil to help meet domestic demand."

The company closed the year with $229,484,171 in cash and marketable securities, a decrease of $11,155,261 were $474,321,017, an increase of $51, during the year. Net current assets 611,684. Shareholders' equity increased during the year to $1,845,092,829, or to $52.74 per share. The company's total assets had reached $2,361,912,029 at December 31.

Socony Mobil's capital expenditures in 1955 in the Western Hemisphere outside the United States, principal outlays were for producing in Canada and Venezuela.

Socony Mobil spent $17,000,000 last year on scientific research—the largest outlay for this activity in the company's history.

The three anchors of the new Canadian Pacific flagship Empress of Britain together weigh 25 tons.

SAFETY BATH

For those handicapped by rheumatism, paralysis, etc. there's a lift that enables them to take a bath unaided and without danger, reports The Financial Post. Consists of a seat with backrest which is placed in the water and raised to the rim of the bath by water pressure. Patient sits on the seat, lifts his legs into the bath and on pushing a lever is lowered gently into the water. A contrary movement of the lever returns the seat to its original position. A rubber tube from the tap to the base of the apparatus supplies the hydraulic pressure. Normal mains pressure of 15 lb. per sq. inch will raise a weight of 490 lb.

An eminent spokesman of the central government of the Roman Catholic Church has hinted that the Vatican would like to become a full-fledged member of the United Nations.

Valerio Cardinal Valeri, who is in charge of the church's religious orders and was formerly a papal diplomat, said the Vatican's efforts for peace could be more effective if the Pope's voice could be "heard within the great international assembles".

The Holy See is at present admitted as an observer to the meetings of most UN bodies.

It is assumed that revision of the UN Charter would be needed for the Vatican's admission to full membership of the UN.

The 1956 Cancer Crusade for $2,100,000.00 is geared to the slogan "Fight Cancer with a Checkup and a Cheque".

The Canadian Cancer Society's annual April fund raising and education campaign, carried on by more than half a million volunteers, is aimed at bringing the full story of the new "fight cancer" message into every Canadian home.

Cancer Society officials say the "checkup and a cheque" headline dramatizes the two most powerful anti-cancer actions the public can undertake today.

The Society says the "checkup" or regular health examination, is the best cancer insurance available. It gives a doctor an opportunity to detect cancer in its earliest stage—when it is still a local disease and most often curable.

The "cheque" symbolizes a contribution—whether cash or coin or actual cheque—made in a spirit of thoughtful, informed giving. Cancer Crusade leaders point out that the Society depends entirely on the public to support its three point programme of research, education and welfare to cancer patients.

These leaders believe that public support for the cancer control movement is in proportion to its understanding of the menace of cancer and how the Cancer Society works.

As they see it:

Personal knowledge of cancer safeguards health, protects life. The extent of this knowledge also is a measure of support for the Cancer Society's programme of saving lives with the help of education.

An understanding of cancer research—its scope and progress—inspires confidence that cancer can be conquered once and for all. This also means growing support for the Cancer Society's programme of research by several hundred topflight scientists in institutions throughout Canada.

A public that knows the Cancer Society's programme of service and comfort to cancer patients will also want to support it and participate in it.

Experience has taught the Canadian Cancer Society that fund raising and education go hand in hand in effective cancer control activities. The slogan, "Fight Cancer with a checkup and a cheque" is a good example.

Stack Mover Hauls 100 Tons a Day Without Hand Labor

Easily handling 10 to 15 8-ton stacks per day at a cost of 25¢ to $1.00 per ton, this new machine makes it possible to eliminate most of the labor and cost of moving hay from field to feed lot. When teamed with a hydraulic stacker equipped with grapple fork for removing hay from the stack, this mover makes possible the completely mechanical handling of hay from windrow to livestock.

The stack mover is a tilt-bed, trailer-type unit which loads and unloads haystacks by means of cables and winch operated from tractor P.T.O. Capacity rated at 8 tons, it handles stacks 16 ft. wide by 24 ft. long or round stacks up to 20 ft in diameter. A 2-3 plow tractor is adequate to handle the unit. The stack mover has recently been introduced by The Farmhand Company, Hopkins, Minn.

Users of this method of hay handling report these advantages. A labor reduction of 50% to 75%; completely mechanized handling in large units; avoids repetition in handling; no wire or twine to buy; hay spends less time in windrow; stacks can be moved in slack seasons; extremely long moving season; practically no machine operating or maintenance cost; elimination of "hardware disease"; better weathering of hay in stacks than bale piles; long moving season makes possible custom moving or sharing use and cost of stack mover for the benefit of the smaller operator.
